

NOTE: The area included within the dotted lines is the section which was under water both in 1924 and 1936.

Although the 1936 flood was 25 or more percent worse, the difference lay in the depth of the water and in the speed of the current rather than in the area covered.

Official Red Cross estimates placed the homeless as a result of the flood at 1200 families, or 6,000 individuals.
